35 Years of Emergency Medicine, the New, the Old, the Recycled

Dennis Allin

University of Kansas, USA

The last three decades have seen incredible changes in medicine with an explosion of technology, new therapies, and an unprecedented “flattening” of the world relative to the practice of Emergency Medicine. This talk will explore how these changes have made the practice of Emergency Medicine easier, how it has made our decisions more complex and how old therapies have re-emerged, as well as how the evolving utilization and expectations of Emergency Medicine have changed our educational programs over the last 3 decades.
